

TOMORROW'S OPPORTUNITY LAST FOR TIMES' CHECKS

Rush Continues, Claimants
In Long Line Displaying Enthusiasm.

TO MEET REQUESTS
FROM OUT-OF-TOWN

Convert to "Thrift Movement"
Heads Throng of Applicants
Besieging Office.

Leadens skies and snow-covered streets did not chill the enthusiasm today of hundreds who had read of the savings' accounts which The Washington Times is beginning for all those who come to the Times building to get a small pocket bank and a check for fifty cents.

Again today a throng of men, women, and boys had congregated at The Times building long before 11:30, the hour for the distribution. Nearly all had some friend or relative who, during the past few days, has become a depositor at the bank through the great plan of The Times.

One old man frankly acknowledged that he had not called for a bank before, because he believed "there was some string tied to such a plan, and a knot in the string."

But several members of his family had believed in the offer, and had returned home to show him the pocket safes and checks they had obtained. Now, a thorough convert, not only to the wisdom of saving money, but to the good faith of The Times, he today headed the long line of those waiting before the savings bank window in the Munsey Building.

One man who arrived late, and whose neighbors were having some fun at his expense, declared that it was not surprising if a man who had come all the way from Oxon Hill, Md., to secure a bank and check, should happen to be a few minutes late.

A mother who was accompanied by her young daughter, was heard discussing the savings plan with the woman who stood next her in line.

"I have often thought of opening an account, and trying to save my money," she said, "and my brother, who has had a savings account for a long time, is always coaxing me to do it, too. But somehow, I never got around to it. I just put it off, though, I could easily have saved a little every week. When I first read the stories in The Washington Times, I made up my mind I'd start right away, and would get that check to add to my account."

Willie Ward, a boy of sixteen, who came from Arlington this morning to get his bank and check. He had very definite ideas as to what part his bank is going to play in his affairs as a business man.

"I am going to save up until I am twenty-one," he announced, "and then I am going to buy a fine home at Arlington and have a true garden and a fruit orchard."

A little German woman, who has only recently come from Bavaria, and whose English is still uncertain, came to ask if she had understood correctly when a friend told her that The Washington Times was giving away banks and checks for 50 cents. Her delight on being assured that this was really true was good to see.

"Then I will see my dear mother once more," she exclaimed. Asked what this meant, she explained that she had longed to secure a bank and start a "transportation fund" for her old mother in Bavaria, getting each member of the family to contribute their nickels until enough had been saved to purchase a ticket from far away Bavaria to America.

And there, across the water, an old woman will be waiting hopefully while the little fund in the Fourteenth Street Savings Bank is growing until it reaches the (to her) fabulous amount sufficient to purchase a ticket to the new country.

The depositors who are opening accounts with The Washington Times 50-cent checks, said one of the officers of the Fourteenth Street Savings Bank, yesterday, "are all enthusiastic over saving money in this way. There are so many nickels and dimes thrown away foolishly that it is surprising how fast they accumulate if dropped into a savings bank."

Meanwhile, the requests received from

THE TIMES' OFFER

CLOSES TOMORROW

Tomorrow is the last day free-pocket banks and checks for 50 cents each will be distributed from The Times office. Mail applications will all be filled as soon as possible.

out-of-town readers for banks and checks, are increasing with every mail. Some of these readers have not had their letters answered at once owing to the great rush of business at the savings bank window each day, the clerks being kept busy by the demands of the thousands who have called in person to obtain their banks and checks.

All out-of-town readers are asked to remember, however, that their letters requesting banks and checks will not be neglected. In a short time, they will receive from The Times a small package, which, it is to be hoped, will start them upon the road to good fortune, as soon as they have made out their postoffice of express order, or sent their check for $2 as a deposit at the Fourteenth Street Savings Bank.

RIGID STANDARDS FOR WOMEN ONLY

Bigham Insists Femininity's
Errors Have Deeper Significance Than Men's.

LONDON, March 11.—Despite the fact that he has been the target of criticism and abuse since his recent declaration for different standards of morality for men and women, Sir John Bigham, until a few days ago the president of the divorce division of the English courts, today reiterated his views and sought to explain his position.

"Misconduct by a man," he says, "has not anything like the same significance as the same misconduct by a woman. On the part of a man it may be more or less accidental and not inconsistent with continued love and esteem of his wife. But misconduct by a woman is inconsistent with love and esteem of her husband."

This explanation does not seem likely to re-ignite Sir John in the good graces of those who disagree with him. Many of his friends while, admitting that what he says may be true, deprecate the recognition by law of a double standard. Sir John's former colleague on the divorce bench, Justice Bargarave Deane, is among those who most bitterly assail him.

"I do not see how misconduct is more immoral on one side than on the other," he said, "but I do think a great many men are immoral because they know that under English law, their wives cannot divorce them for immorality. If this law were changed, it would act as a powerful deterrent."

It was the expression of Sir John's views before the royal commission on divorce law reform that led to his withdrawal from the divorce court.

WILL REMOVE BODY OF NABUCO MARCH 16

Ceremonies Arranged In Honor of Late Ambassador From Brazil.

Accompanied by representatives from the State Department and the Brazilian embassy, the body of Senator Joaquim Nabuco, late Brazilian ambassador to the United States, will be taken to Norfolk next Wednesday on the Mayflower. At Norfolk the body will be placed on board the North Carolina, which will be conveyed to Brazil by the Brazilian cruiser Minas Geraes. The body will be escorted from Oak Hill Cemetery, where it now rests, to the navy yard by a troop of cavalry. A naval escort will accompany the cortege through the navy yard and aboard the Mayflower. It is probable that Third Assistant Secretary of State Hale will represent the State Department on the trip to Norfolk. Senator Nabuco's son and an attaché from the embassy will sail on the North Carolina.

BASIC CITY IS DRY FOR NEXT CENTURY

RICHMOND, Va., March 11.—Basic City is in for a long dry spell as a result of the action of the State Legislature in passing an amendment to the municipality's charter prohibiting the sale of liquor for ninety-nine years. The appropriation of the University of Virginia was cut by the house last night 10 per cent. The matter will be fought out again. No decision was reached on the appropriation bill, the senate and house failing to agree. J. H. Fletcher, of Accomac, has been elected judge of the thirty-first court of Accomac and Northampton. N. W. Robertson has been named judge of the law and chancery court at Roanoke.

Distinctive Ready-for-Service Spring and Summer Clothes For Men and Young Men

IN which lasting shapeliness is secured by perfect tailoring and superior construction. The necessary use of light-weight fabrics for the spring and summer season provides the most severe test to which the product of makers of men's and young men's apparel can be subjected.

Loss of shapeliness is fatal to style, neither can it be restored except temporarily by the simple process of ironing.

To secure lasting distinction and elegance, our makers, Hart Schaffner & Marx, and others scarcely less noted, begin at the foundation—the unseen inner parts, stays and linings—all of which receive at the hands of their tailors the important consideration their training has taught to bestow upon these garments.

We are anxious to have you see the new patterns and colorings of the new season. Some very smart grays, blues, and browns; exquisite patterns; stylish models.

DECLARES FATHER KEPT SWAINS AWAY

Young Men Repelled By
Parent's Habits, Says
Daughter.

NEW YORK, March 11.—Pretty Margaret Holloway, nineteen years old, who lives with her parents at three sisters at 415 Fort Hamilton Parkway, Brooklyn, declared in the Flatbush court, before Magistrate Nash, that her father, James Holloway, had been the cause of her men friends ceasing their calls upon her and that he had really prevented her from getting married.

When the girl's mother, Mrs. Mary Holloway, corroborated the story told by her daughter, and added that her husband had been in the habit of coming home intoxicated, Magistrate Nash committed the father to the observation ward of the Kings County Hospital. The magistrate ordered Holloway, if he is released from the hospital, not to molest his wife or children further.

"Every time I want to go to a dance," said Margaret on the stand, "I have to ask my father's permission, and he invariably refuses."

The girl added that her father was so disagreeable to her men friends who called at the house that they never called again.

"He told one of my friends something about me," she testified, "that made the young man stay away from me."

Then the girl said that yesterday her father had seized her arms and held them, and that when she managed to break away she tried to seize a table-spoon to use to defend herself. Her father thereupon fled from the room.

Holloway said he had found young men at his home very late at night and that he did not like it.

"The men keep the girls up so late at night that they can't get up to go to church early the following day," said Holloway.
